Nerd Central Comics Cookies Policy

Cookies

Put simply, a cookie is technology for remembering something about you.

Well over 90% of websites use cookies. Cookies do not contain any personal information about you and cannot be used to identify an individual user.

They aren't automatically good or bad, but it's worth understanding what you can do about them.

Without cookies, a website is limited in its functionality. It can't automatically log you in, because it forgets who you are. It can't let you buy anything, because it forgets what you're buying. On a positive note, it also means it can't track you.

Most web browsers accept cookies by default. However, if you are uncomfortable with cookies, you may be able to set your web browser to refuse all cookies or to let you know when a cookie is sent to your computer – you can then choose whether to accept the cookie, or not. The Help function within your browser should tell you how.

Please note: By refusing our cookies or disabling future cookies you may not be able to use certain areas or features of our site.

A better option would be to turn off 3rd party cookies, which will stop most websites from sharing information about you. Some browsers – like Safari – do this automatically.

Cookies set by Third Party sites

Some websites use cookies to remember what you do on their website, and to target ads at you. Some of those websites share their cookies, so that ads on one website know what you liked on another.

To support our websites, we sometimes embed photos and video content from websites such as YouTube and Flickr. As a result, when you visit a page with content embedded from, for example, YouTube or Flickr, you may be presented with cookies from these websites. Nerd Central Comics does not control the functionality and activity of these cookies. You should check the relevant third party website for more information about these.

Please note: If you choose not to disable cookies you are agreeing to us using them on our websites.
